Saif's got the look

URMIMALA BANERJEE

SAIF has been looking remarkably different these days with longer hair and overgrown stubble. When we caught up with him at a Frito Lays event, we couldn't help noticing the change. But Saif reassures that it is not for any film. "For me, it's important to look different from time to time. It's like reinventing myself. I don't want to get bored when I look at myself in the mirror."

Saif rues that men have quite limited options when it comes to trying out style experiments. "After all, I can only experiment a little with my hair or my beard, so I try to change my look from time to time," he says. And does his lady love approve? "Oh yes, Kareena likes this new rugged look of mine," he says while grabbing a bite of some chicken, boiled mushrooms and veggies.

So what is a health freak like Saif doing at the launch of potato chips? "I love potato chips. I also love paanipuri and bhelpuri. I am a healthy eater per se, but I like to indulge once a while," he signs off.
